

Meet Paul Bunyan and His Blue Ox, Babe (cont.)

- Paul Bunyan: Babe is so strong that he can pull anything that has two ends.
- Babe: Except Paul! And Paul will never let me push him!
- Narrator 2: Babe can pull anything? I will bet Babe can't "pull our leg"!!
(slapping knee and laughing at his or her own joke)
- Entire Cast: Babe is the greatest, bluest beast ever was.
- Narrator 1: Paul once used Babe to straighten out thirty miles of crooked town road.
- Paul Bunyan: Babe, you are the greatest, bluest beast ever was. Now you take the end of this crooked road and pull.
- Entire Cast: Babe is the greatest, bluest beast ever was. Pull, Babe, pull!
Pull, Babe, pull!
- Paul Bunyan: Pull, Babe, pull! Pull, Babe, pull!
- Narrator 1: Babe is so strong that he can pull anything that has two ends. Babe pulled and pulled. He pulled and pulled.
- Narrator 2: I wonder what our P.E. teacher would say to that? This sounds like a rope pull to me.
- Narrator 1: When Babe had pulled all the twists and curves straight, there were an extra twelve miles of road left over.
- Babe: Paul rolled it all up and gave it back to the town to use elsewhere.
- Narrator 2: Does the city planning department know this story?
- Entire Cast: Paul Bunyan is a mighty giant of a man. Babe is the greatest, bluest beast ever was.
- Narrator 2: You said that before! We understand! Paul Bunyan is a mighty, giant of a man. Babe is the greatest, bluest beast ever was.
